100% natural Damask rose water products

Cecile Wykes, a chemical engineer with a passion for rose essence extraction, and her husband Jerry (mechanical engineer), moved away from the petrochemical industry and established a rose and cattle farm in the Free State. They imported and planted a Bulgarian variety of Damask roses and set up steam distillation units for essence extraction. Cecile & Jerry are passionate about keeping all things as natural as possible and use fertilization such as free-range goose pond effluent, free range cattle manure and vermi-compost.

No chemical pesticides or herbicides are used, instead, plant health is ensured through microbe supplements. The nurturing of the rose bushes, through to picking the delicate pink petals, is highly labour intensive and provides employment for local families in the secluded valley.

Our 100% natural Damask Rose Water is steam distilled, contains no pesticides, fungicides, additives or artificial fragrances.
